

VOICE 'WE MUST DO BETTER' MEDIA TOOLKIT

REPORT LAUNCH - MARCH 11

Thank you for helping us to share our most recent report We Must Do Better. As we slowly adapt to the realities of the pandemic, it is important for us to remember the continuously under-served women and girls around the world that have, and continue to bear the heavy impact of COVID-19. We believe this report is pertinent not just to policymakers and aid organizations, but to researchers, donors, and social activists alike. With your collaboration, we can share the report findings with your networks to reach all kinds of groups and individuals, and hopefully inspire well-informed, meaningful action and change.

WMDB Report Summary & Purpose

We know that local women and girl-led organizations and networks are essential to addressing violence against women and girls (VAWG), yet despite high-level global commitment among humanitarian actors to increase funding for local and national implementing agencies, progress toward localization of humanitarian action, including VAWG response, has been far too slow.

Significant funding gaps for girl- and women-led organizations limits their ability to scale up when they need to respond to emergencies, grow their programs, secure additional funding for their activities, and better serve the girls and women in their communities. These challenges have been heavily compounded by COVID-19.

In August 2020, VOICE introduced its "We Must Do Better" series, a research initiative with the aim of exposing the dire vulnerability of women and girls around the world as a result of the pandemic.

The outcomes of this study provide an opportunity for reflection on the scale of this global emergency, the kinds of groups, organizations and associations that women and girls are working within and leading, the impact on them related to funding priorities and needs, the ways in which donors seek and value these types of partners, and the kinds of needs that are central in the on-going COVID-19 pandemic response.

GIF Statement

During the pandemic we have seen the immense needs facing women-led organizations providing support and services to their communities. We have seen increases in just about every type of violence against women and girls because of lockdowns, restrictions, and lack of access. Read the full report at voiceamplified.org.
